Freelancers Offered Free Portfolios and Fast Financial Withdrawals With New Website.

NAME OF TOWN, USA: Online freelancers are angry with the auction-format, project-based outsourcing websites of late, and for good reason. Many sites in this new online economic exchange charge freelancers high fees and regulate unusually long wait times for project payment. These findings come from ContractList.com's ENTER JOB TITLE HERE, ENTER NAME HERE, while researching the demand for highly skilled freelancers in the online marketplace.

"I was very surprised with how strongly freelancers felt about these issues," LAST NAME said. "It shows that there is a demand for responsive outsourcing websites that cater to those who are thinking about outsourcing for the first time, as well as experienced professionals."

While most outsourcing websites currently offer payment dates ranging from five to thirty-five days after a project is completed, ContractList.com offers a same-day withdrawal guarantee. Additionally, ContractList.com offers those who are thinking about outsourcing online portfolios to show off their work, at no additional cost.

ContractList.com was founded in YEAR to provide contractors who are thinking about outsourcing a new way of doing business. The website offers a wide range of project types, such as multimedia, design, writing and translation, and offer user scripts and applications in an auction-style marketplace.
